Fremont Cannon signals every Nevada touchdown

The scene was the University of Nevada, Reno, dressing room early in the 1973 football campaign. The Wolf Pack had just scored an impressive victory over Chico State. In the excitement of victory Nevada quarterback Gene Watkins exclaimed, "I think we've got a machine."

Maybe UNR wasn't a machine, but by the end of the season the Wolf Pack had proved to its Southern cousins and all the fans in Mackay Stadium that it had the best Nevada team in 25 years.

1973 witnessed for Nevada losses, some of the most disappointing ones ever suffered. Three losses came on the road at San Francisco State, Santa Clara and UC-Davis; the other was a Homecoming setback to Cal-State Fullerton.

But the good news for Nevada fans was the seven victories, ground out by a Wolf Pack team of character that managed to bounce back from defeat time and again. There was the last-second victory over Boise State, and the all-around team effort over Idaho State. But the greatest triumph in Northern Nevada was the victory over Mike Thomas and his rebel teammates.

The team showed its truly unique character, when, after quarterback Gene Watkins broke his ankle in the middle of the season, it united under the direction of Jim House and Jack Fischer.

Dave Clapham, Wolf Pack Offensive tackle, was selected third team Little All-America, while Ernie O'Leary garnered honorable mention. Pack back Mike Balentine was named Most Valuable Player for 1973.

When you put it all together, it was a great season for the Wolf Pack. Artemisisa salutes coach Jerry Scattini, his staff and all the players.

"I think we had a tremendous year. I feel the victories over Stanford, LSU and the two over Santa Clara were beyond the wildest dreams of Wolf Pack fans." — Coach Jim Padgett

The remainder of the season was uneventful for the Wolf Pack as the team finished on the losing end of the record, 11-15, with a 4-10 record in the WCAC.

The season was highlighted with the selection of center Pete Padgett to the All-WCAC first team, the first Wolf Pack basketball player ever chosen to the league's "dream team."

Dave Webber was selected for the all-conference second team.

Marvin Buckley became the 10th round draft choice of the Golden State Warriors.

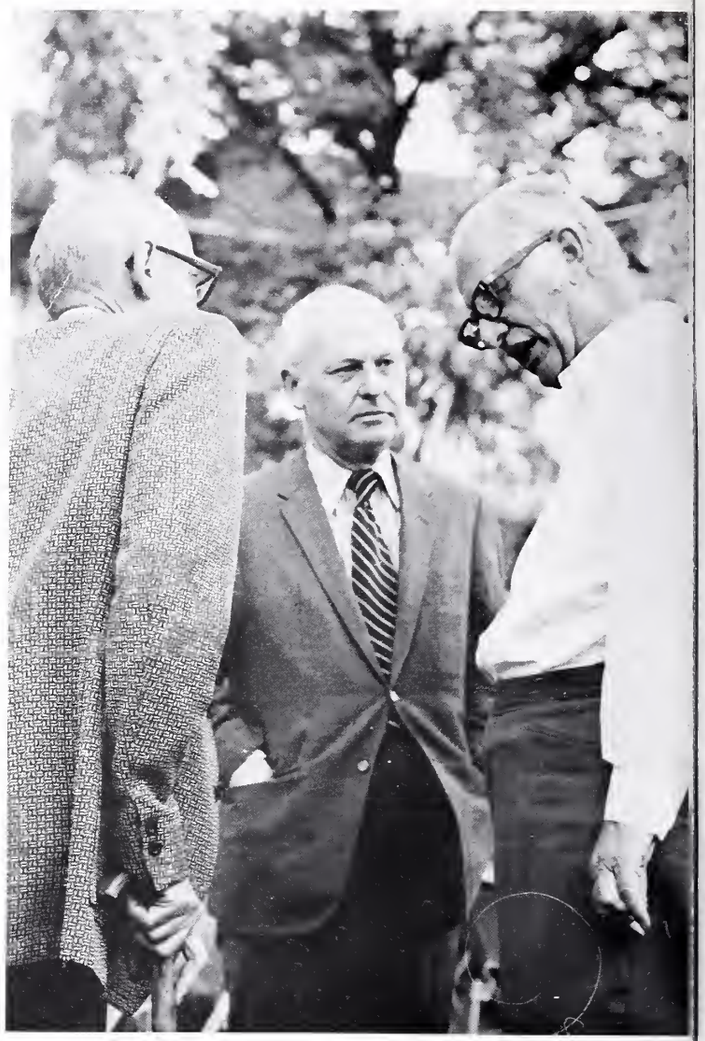
A letter from N. Edd Miller



I want to take this opportunity to express to you my deep and heartfelt thanks for helping to make my eight years in Nevada the most memorable years possible to anyone. It is an understatement to say that I have enjoyed working with the University of Nevada, Reno, students during this period. I have seen much change, and most of it for the good, in these eight years and I congratulate you on making this change possible.

You and your predecessors have accomplished much for this university and you have supplied Mrs. Miller and me with so many memories of fine things that we will always be grateful to you. You have our warmest best wishes for great successes in the future and much personal happiness.

Thank you and god speed.

Selected Faculty

Dr. James W. Hulse

As a history professor with a journalistic background, it only seemed natural that Dr. James W. Hulse should be chosen to write a centennial history of the University of Nevada.

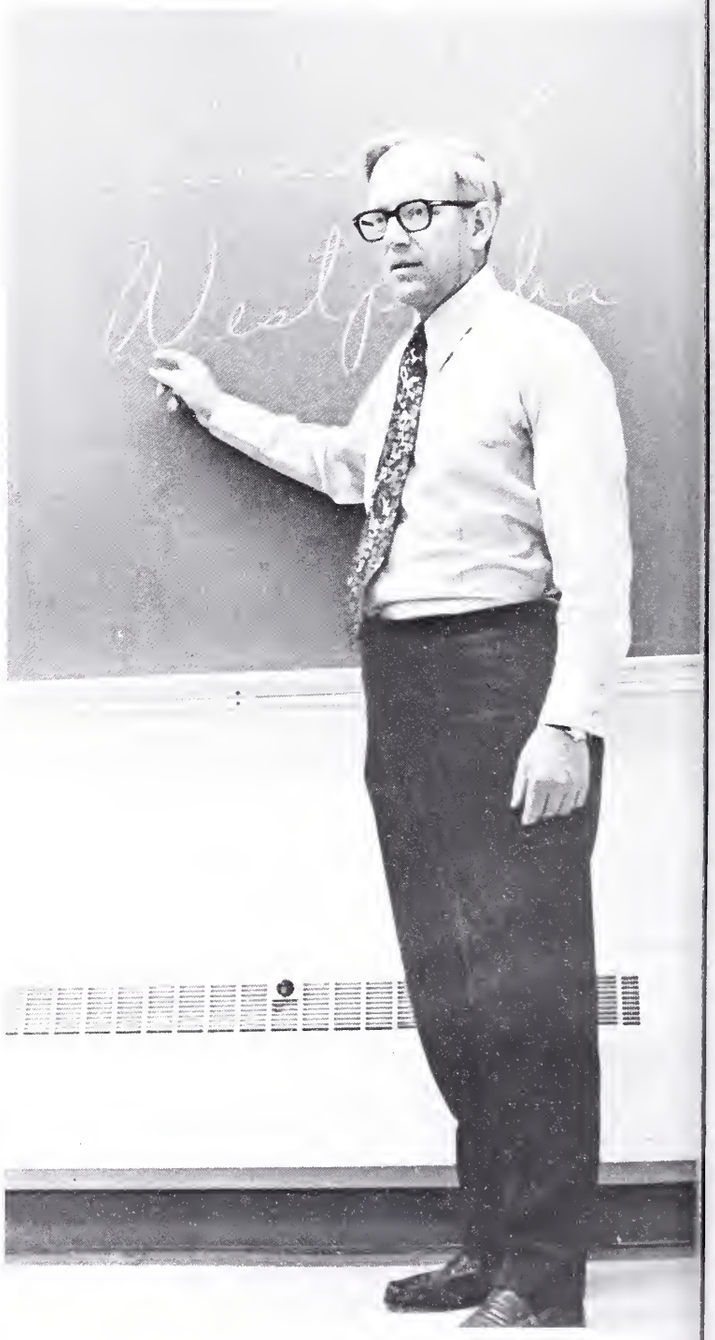
Born in 1930 in Pioche, Nev., Dr. Hulse earned a degree in Journalism at UNR.

His interest in history began with the U.S. Army in France. He devoured books on European history, and when he returned to the United States, he enrolled as a graduate student in the UNR history department while working as a reporter for the Nevada State Journal.

In 1961, Dr. Hulse received his Ph.D. at Stanford, and three years later, he returned to UNR as a history professor.

Dr. Hulse is the author of four publications. His most recent book is "The University of Nevada: A Centennial History." It will appear during the University's centennial celebration.

"Learning is the most important enterprise a person can undertake, and helping others to learn must be the most rewarding profession of all," said Dr. Hulse. "It is a privilege to be in this profession; I prefer to call it the learning profession rather than the teaching profession, and to share with students and colleagues the adventure of making new discoveries."



Dr. Kathryn Duffy

Kathryn Duffy, S.J.D., is the only woman professor of Business Law and Real Estate at the University of Nevada.

Born and educated in New York, Dr. Duffy taught in the East and practiced law in New York for 13 years.

She came to Nevada in 1957, accepting a teaching position traditionally held by men.

Dr. Duffy is the first woman to hold office in the American Women's Business Law Association. She is listed in "World's Who's Who of Women," "Who's Who of American Women," and the International Scholars Directory.

She is organizer and adviser to the on-campus chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, the business fraternity. She is also on the College Business Scholarship Committee and directs a real estate program.

"I like my students," said Dr. Duffy. "I enjoy making them think and I feel my responsibility is to guide them and make them do the work. I get a great deal of joy knowing a student has performed to his capacity."

Dr. Baldev K. Vig

When the Department of Biology hired Baldev K. Vig, Ph.D. in 1968, he was its first geneticist. In the six years he has been at UNR he has done extensive lab work in cancer research, published over 40 works and kept a full teaching load.

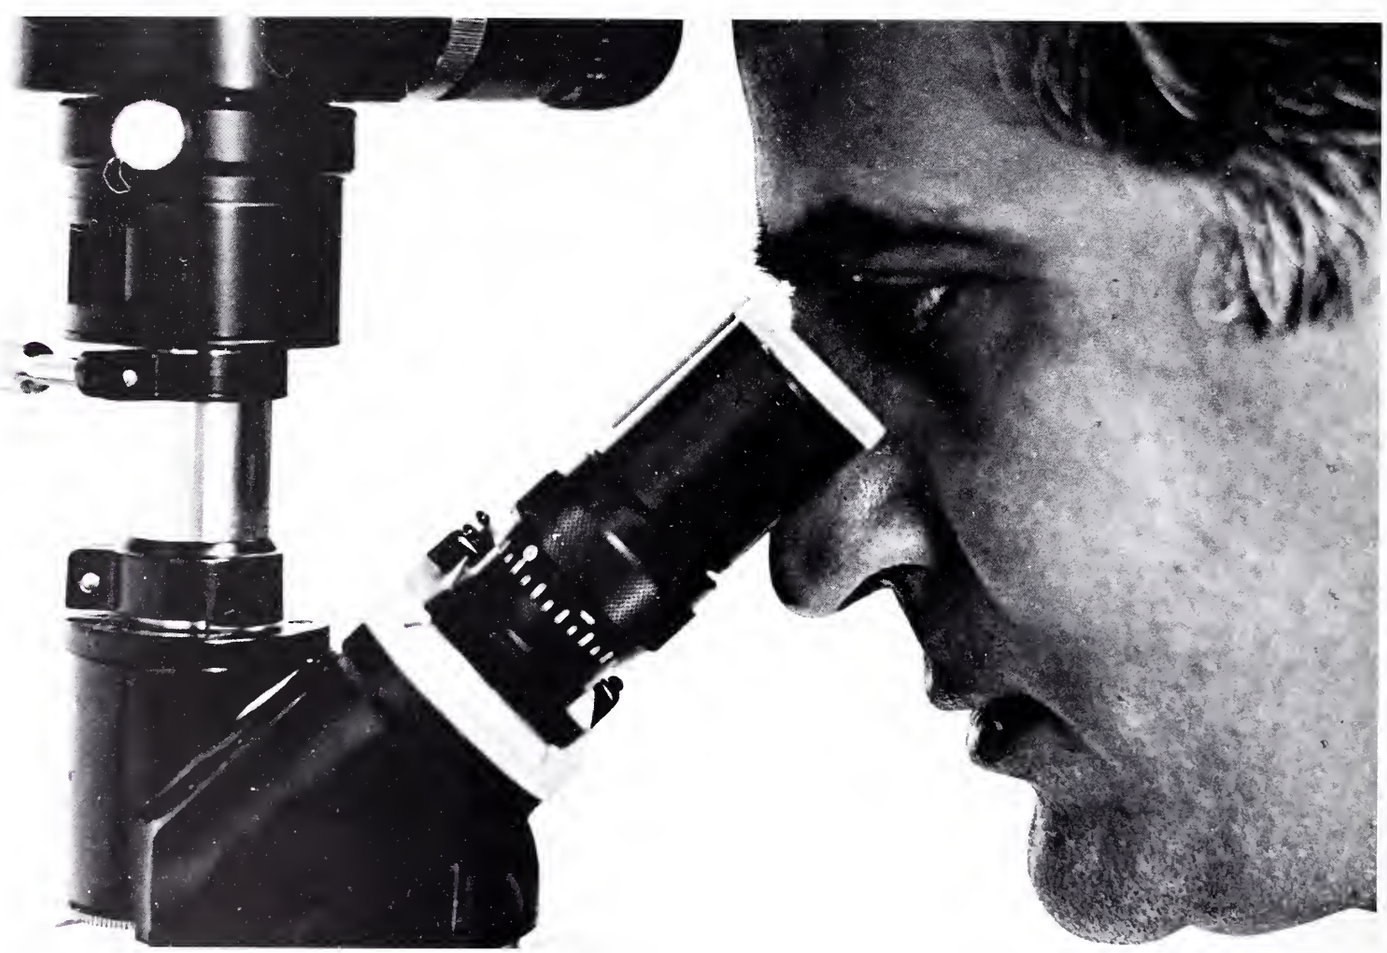
Born in West Pakistan, he received his doctorate from Ohio State University in 1967 and was associated with the Children's Hospital in Columbus as a research cytogeneticist and genetic counselor.

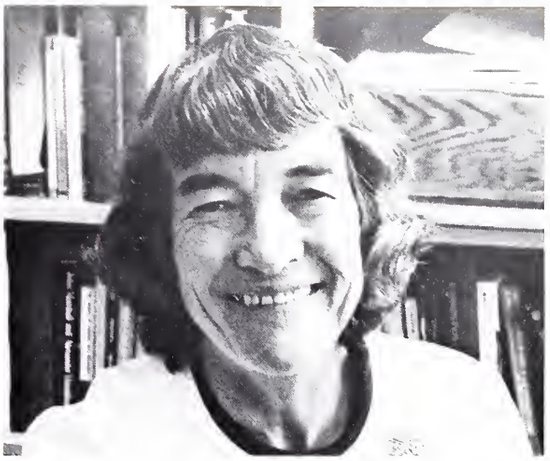
In his lab research, Dr. Vig discovered that caffein is capable of causing genetic damage which may lead to cancer.

Dr. Vig is chairman of the Academic Standards Committee and a member of the Admissions Board. He also belongs to several national and international professional societies.

This coming school year, Dr. Vig will serve as lab researcher in Pullman, Wash. while on sabattical leave. He was awarded the Donald F. Jones Post-doctorate Research Fellowship for this work.

"I love teaching," said Vig. "I'd go crazy in a few days' time if all I did was research. What fun is it if you don't give your knowledge to others?"





Dr. Eleanore Bushnell

When the Political Science Department became independent of the College of Arts and Science in 1963, Eleanore Bushnell, Ph.D. was appointed chairman. She is the first woman to hold this position.

Dr. Bushnell is from Seattle, where she received her Bachelor's degree from the University of Washington. After obtaining her doctorate from the University of California, she taught in Washington and California. She came to Nevada in 1956.

Dr. Bushnell's field is American and constitutional government. She has a strong interest in Nevada politics. "I'm proud to work for people I hove confidence in," she said.

Dr. Bushnell has written three books, including two textbooks. Her fourth book, "Impeachment," will appear in the fall of 1974.

She serves on the Constitutional Committee for Western Political Science Association, the Tenure Committee of the College of Arts ond Science and the university Centennial Committee.

In 1970 she was honored as "Outstanding Political Scientist of the Year" by the Northern California Political Science Association.

Dr. Bushnell believes the best teaching requires current material and notes. "The students respect this quality," she said. "And it mokes it worthwhile to work hard. I have respect for what the students are doing and for the material."

UNR's streaking season began the second week in March. Some of Nevada's interesting epidermal attacks included streaking through a panel discussion on obscenity and morality, streaking down Virginia Street, coed streaking, the first brother and sister team, and the one pictured here — streaking through central campus.
